Israeli Panel Rules for Deportation

By Glenn Frankel

Washington Past Service
JERUSALEM - The Israeli Supreme Court on Sunday upheld a government deportation order against Mubarak Awad, a Palestinan-American advocate of civil disobedience against Israeli rule who has been supported by the United States in his effort to remain in the country.

A three-judge panel rejected Mr.

Awad's argument that as an Arab born in East Jerusalem he had an inalienable right to live in the city. The Israeli justices also accepted the government's contention that Mr. Awad posed a threat to security and public order because of his support for resistance to Israeli military occupation in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

Secretary of State George P.
Shultz, who spent part of the day in Israel on his Middle East peace mission, pressed both Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Foreign Minister Shimon Peres to reconsider the expulsion order at separate meetings on Sunday afternoon, U.S. spokesmen said. But Israeli officials said further review of the deportation order, which is due to gencies.

The problem has added importance because new aircraft, such as the Boeing 747-400, have longer range and will make even longer transocean, nonstop flights when they enter service. At the same time, other aircraft that employ two-member instead of three-member crews, such as the Boeing 757 and 767, are becoming more wide spread. Some experts believe the smaller crews are more vulnerable to boredom and falling asleep.

No one is contending that latigued crews have been responsible for any recent airline accidents. But the fear is that a crew worn out by a week or more of repeatedly crossing multiple time zones will have its judg-ment so impaired that a seemingly minor for pilots to help cut operating costs.

• Some pilots are spending a week or longer on international flight schedules with long hours and multiple crossings of time zones. These schedules are disrupting their biological clocks, or circadian rhythms, making it difficult for them to get proper sleep during layovers.

 Computerized navigation equipment and autopilots have lightened pilots' workloads, giving them little to do while planes are cruising except monitor the instruments. As a result, fatigued pilots are more vulnerable to falling asleep.

 Federal aviation regulations and pi-lots' union contracts address only the amount of time on duty, not the time of day the duty occurs. Thus, many multiplecritical approaches and landings.

"The economics of a very competitive business have really pushed schedules to the extreme," said Dr. Martin C. Moore-Ede, an associate professor of physiology at the Harvard Medical School and director of the Institute for Circadian Physiology, an independent research group.

"We have studied aircrews, ridden with them in the cockpit jump seat, and demon-strated that the behavior of nodding off in the cockpit is a very common one," he said.

French Socialists Head Toward a Slim Majority After First-Round Vote

PARIS - The Socialist Party fell well short of a predicted landslide in the first round of parliamentary elections Sunday but was still favored to win a narrow majority in next week's run-off ballot.

California A Trial Heat Of Fall Vote

By R. W. Apple Jr.

SAN FRANCISCO - II was supposed to provide a rousing grand finale to the nominating season, as it has so often done in the past. But with the presidential candidates in both parties all but cho-sen, the California primary on Tuesday has turned out to be a trial heat for the fall election. Vice President George Bush in-tends to "teach California voters that Dukakis is a lot more liberal than most people here think," a spokesman for his campaign said. The spring contest may have been dull, says an aide to Governor Michael S. Ďukakis of Massachu setts, "but we'll have a fight this fall the likes of which we haven't seen in years.

Only the backers of the Reverend Jesse L. Jackson, Mr. Dukakis's last active rival for the Democratic nomination, seem to be focusing on the primary in California as such.

"We intend to carry California on Tuesday," said Rick Roberts, a press spokesman in Mr. Jackson's headquarters in Los Angeles. Mr. Jackson is going flat-out in the final hours, whether the polls and the pundits give him a chance or not.

Most do not. Three polls conducted in the last two weeks all show Mr. Dukakis with a lead of at least 20 percentage points. The consensus of political analysts in the state is that Mr. Jackson, who won 21 percent of the vote in California four years ago, should pull in from 30 to 35 percent this year -a respectable showing, but certainly not enough to make Mr. Dukakis

The only tiny shadow on the primary-day horizon for the Massachusetts governor is turnout. With interest lagging in the presidential race, no real contest for Senate nominations and no fiercely fought ballot propositions, state officials are predicting the lowest turnout on record for a presidential primary -- about 48 percent of registered voters, or about a third of the 18.9

Citicorp Chairman Looks at Debt Problem With Optimism

John S. Reed, 49, the chairman of Citicorp, the largest U.S. bank holding company, is at the center of negotiations to resolve debt problems with the Third World, Mr. Reed discussed this and other issues with Jacques Neher, a with regard to Mexico that picked up, I frequent contributor to the IHT, at the company's French subsidiary in La Délense near Paris.

Q. A year ago, Citicorp shocked the world financial community by putting aside $3 billion to cover possible bad loans in Latin America. a move which caused other banks to follow suit. Are you convinced it was the right decision? A. It's still early to fairly evaluate it. From our perspective, our sense is that it did accomplish two of the things we were seeking to accomplish. The first objective had been to more properly provide for the risk. We have done so and the banking industry can be seen to be significantly stronger in that regard. The second thing had been to seek to introduce some flexibility from a point of view of the this flexibility indeed exists. You've seen very substantial resbuffling on the part of the banking community of their exposure. You had the Morgan bond offering think, $3 billion worth of this debt from the international banking community. You've seen a lot more innovation. So I would guess a year later, yes, we're feeling reasonably good about it.

Q. How has that event affected negotiations with these countries over the last

A. It's a new reality. On the one hand, the foreign countries recognize that the global financial system is less at risk by virtue of this problem. In that sense, presumably, they feel they've lost some-thing. On the other hand, they say, "Gee, you've already made provisions and that should give you greater flexibility in terms of being able to accommodate and provide for our needs." I've been quite deeply involved in the negotiations with banks in terms of managing their portfo-lios. At this juncture it would appear that most of these borrowers, both on a before and after basis, and I can't see the actual process has been affected at all.

Q. In general, are you any more optimistic about the debt crisis than you were

A. I'm quite a bit more optimistic. I think the world economy and world trade picture is improving, and that is the single most important thing. Countries like

MONDAY Q&A

Mexico and Chile have made major imovements in their situations. Countries like the Philippines are clearly doing well. A year ago, Brazil was an immense problem. Now it's doing quite well and is about to reach an agreement to get back

Q. What still troubles you? A. The whole process is still quite difficult. You have major developing countries that don't have normal access to capital flows. In the long term, that's an untenable situation. With respect, the rhetoric surrounding the discussions con-tinues to be disturbing. There's a lot of political requirements surrounding these discussions. These are quite complicated negotiations that take place within a political and social as well as economic context. As bankers, we're not used to that. Traditionally, bankers do business in a more private mode.

Q. Is the plan proposed by the U.S. Treasury secretary, James A. Baker 3d,

A. Quite to the contrary, it's working. What Baker said — and for some reason the press has refused to give him credit for it - is that these countries should not be forced to simply collapse their economy in order to get back to some kind of ilibrium, but instead they should be supported in their effort to achieve growth as long as they are willing to make structural adjustments. He said also that ead of relying solely on the IMF, let's expand the institutional framework and bring the World Bank into it. That indeed

Q. The plan also called for the banks to extend new capital to these countries.

A. I know that the head of the IMF. Michel Camdessus, made a speech where he alleges we haven't done enough. I wouldn't be impolite, but I would point out that the IMF and the World Bank are net collectors of money in calendar year '88. The new money we're going to put into Brazil. $6 billion from the banks, will indeed go to pay back the IMF and the World Bank. The banking system dispersed $13 billion since the reserve decisions, primarily to Mexico and Argenti-na. For Citibank, that's $400 million to $500 million. The capital flows are greater than they were before Baker spoke. Are they adequate for the task? Not yet.

Q. How will the creation of a borderless internal market in Europe affect Citicorp, and what are you doing? A. It will significantly enhance the activity in the marketplace. We view it very positively and we sense that our customers are all viewing it as an opportunity. It clearly is causing us to heighten our commitment to Europe as a marketplace.

Castro Says He Will Free 385 Political Prisoners

By Joseph B. Treaster

MIAMI — Struggling to im-prove his human rights image, Fidel Castro has declared that he is ready to free all but 44 political prisoners, including many who have been imprisoned for more than 20 years.

In a letter to Cardinal John O'Connor, the Roman Catholic archbishop of New York, the Cuban leader said that he was holding 429 political prisoners and that he would release 385 of them.

Most of the 44 men have been in prison since shortly after Mr. Castro came to power in 1959.

They have resisted political indoctrination and prison rules and have become known as the plantados, or rooted ones.

For years they were the most harshly treated prisoners.

General Oriesa called the spinin the cease-fire that began two months ago, and he warned that the rebels would lose everything they stood to gain through peace talks if they renewed their war against the Sandinist government,

General Humberto Ortega Saavedra also said Saturday that the rebel military commander, Enrique Bermudez, was under U.S. orders to sabotage peace talks between rebel and Sandinist leaders.

The two sides are to meet Tuesday in Managua for a fourth negotiating session aimed at ending their seven-year conflict. "In recent days their attacks have been increasing," General Ortega said at a news conference. "If they opt for war they will lose all they can gain at the negotiating table."

The Sandinists say they have made major concessions to the rebels by promising to meet their demands for significant moves toward democracy.

Polish Official Begins Week's Visit to China

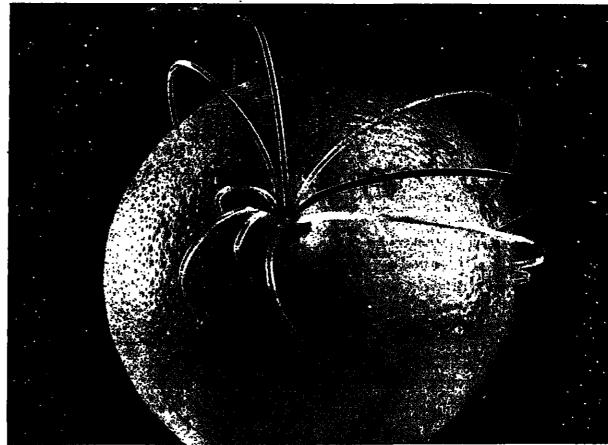

BEIJING - Prime Minister Zbigniew Messner of Poland arrived in China on Sunday for talks with senior Chinese officials in what some observers saw as a further sign of China's improving ties with Eastern Europe. The official news agency Xinhua said Mr. Messner would discuss bilateral relations and international issues during his weeklong visit.

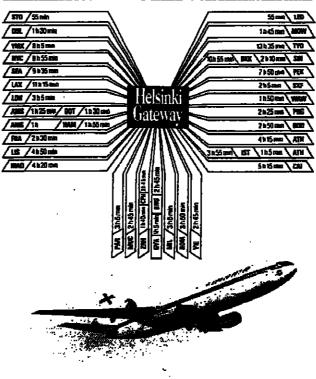

China has expanded its ties with Eastern Europe in recent years in a gradual thawing of relations frozen by an ideological rift with Moscow in the 1960s, Prime Minister Zhao Zivang visited Poland last June and Wojciech Jaruzelski, the Polish leader, toured China in September cease-fire that it declared when the Investigators said that the blast had left a crater 26 meters deep (85 feet deep) and 53 meters in diameter, the Soviet media reported. According to articles about the accident published Sunday by Izvestia and by Tass, the rescue and cleanup crews moved into the disaster area quickly. Firefighters arrived in a matter of minutes, Tass said. Eighty medical specialists were flown in from Gorky, 20 eams of doctors were dispatched from Moscow and a makeshift hospital was set up on the spot, official reports said.

Traffic on the rail line has resumed, the agency said, adding:
"All around, aid is being rendered Kremlin, in Shift, to Permit Soviets to the families of disaster victims, the injured and all sufferers." The displaced will be given compensation and new apartments, it added. Still, official reports have indicated that the consequences of the accident are far from settled.

"The medical personnel in the hospital of the city are doing their best to save the life of every single person." Tass said, suggesting that the rescue operation was still in full swing Sunday.

Western reporters have been unable to travel to the site, which is off limits to foreigners. Gorky, the nearest city, is shut off because of sensitive industrial facilities. Nearly 400 kilometers from Moscow, Gorky is where Andrei D. Sakharov, the physicist and dissident, was exiled for seven years.

The Arzamas blast is the latest accident to be reported in the Soviet media in the past two years, beginning with coverage of the Chernobyl nuclear accident of April 1986. Since then, two Soviet freighters have collided in the Black Sea, and a Ukrainian coal mine has caved in, among other reported disasters.

A leading Soviet sociologist has blamed the disasters on shoddy standards of Soviet workers. The sociologist, Tatiana Zaslavsakaya, said Friday that such incidents could be avoided if the level of work were raised.

voice to his fondest hopes in his address in London on Friday. Speaking of his Mos-cow trip, he allowed himself to suggest that "a new era in history" is dawning. For these and other incautious remarks, he will be roundly tut-tutted now that he is home, not least by those who were originally closest to him politically. Surely some part of Mr. Reagan is perfectly aware that he overspoke. Yet his London message should not be dismissed merely as a bout of not unprecedented summit-induced enphoria. There is more to it than that.

Sophisticated students of history and politics will know how dangerous it is to hail new eras in history. But something important looks to be changing, and people should not let habit and discretion prevent them from seeing it. Mr. Reagan spoke of his 1982 "crusade for freedom" speech in London. It was a powerful speech suggesting that large forces were in motion and great values at stake. Many pooh-poohed Mr. Reagan, but six years later it is evident that he had a point. If change is not as sweeping and permanent as he would like, it cuts broader and deeper than the scoffers imagined. The INF Treaty, withdrawal from Afghanistan and incipient reforms in the Soviet Union - the troika of events that Mr. Reagan mentioned on Friday - are not conclusive, he said, but they are momentous. Well, they deserve to be taken in their totality as pretty close to that.

Those who fear that Mr. Reagan may be

It was Rouald Reagan's moment to give going overboard will perhaps be comforted on the "new era" by no less authoritative a Soviet source than Mikhail Gorbachev. The Soviet leader detects "a lot of contradictions" in the Reagan position. "On the one hand," he summed up, "we have a joint statement that there should be no war, that war is inadmissible, we are engaged in a businesslike dialogue about arms reductions, we're talking about preferences for political solutions fin regional conflicts]. And yet, on the other hand, we keep hearing ... words about a stake made on strength ... "He went on: This is to be seen in economic ties also where an authoritative part - sections of the American business circles are in favor of cooperation, but they are faced with intimidation, with all sorts of restrictions."

General Secretary Gorbachev is right.

Notwithstanding President Reagan's London enthusiasms, there are contradictions We would argue, however, that they are not unfounded, reflecting as they do the existing uncertainty and complexity, and they need not be crippling. "Let us em-brace honest change when it occurs," Mr. Reagan said on Friday, "but let us also be wary." This is the essential "contraction" that has brought the progress and This is the essential "contradio promise now in view. It is a formulation that banishes the patronizing and misguided question of whether the West should lp" Mr. Gorbachev. It is a simple and reliable basis on which to proceed.

major victories last week. His negotiators reached an agreement in principle with the International Monetary Fund on new economic support. And the Brazilian Congress said that he could remain in office through 1990. He now has breathing space to reverse a disastrous economic course. Outsiders, including American banks, can help him, but too much meddling could strengthen the very forces he needs to overcome.

Brazil ended 21 years of military rule in 1985. Three years of inconsistent economic management under Mr. Sarney have sapped confidence in its once well regarded econoierked the world's eighth largest capitalist economy back and forth between free spending and austerity, price controls and laissezfaire, protectionism and openness.

It is not so much transition to democracy that is to blame as the lack of it. Mr. Sarney took office without a popular election and had no experience with democratic institutions. Eager to create a popular base, he has been unable to resist special interests or to demand needed sacrifices. This has fed inflation, corruption and drift.

Prodded by Finance Minister Mailson Ferreira da Nobrega, Mr. Sarney agreed to trade and investment. Government payrolls a major contributor to budget deficits and inflation, have been temporarily frozen. Cooperation with the IMF has been resumed Brazilian negotiators now look to early agreement with commercial banks on rescheduling $62 billion in outstanding debt.

Regrettably, a less realistic economic agenda is being advanced by Brazil's popularly elected Congress. Dominated by a nationalist coalition embracing both left and right, it has loaded the draft of a new constitution with restrictions on foreign investment, and it has blocked land reform.

Most alarming, Brazil's still powerful military interests have again become power brokers. Mr. Sarney, faced with strong popular opposition to a longer term, prevailed only after military commanders leaned heavily on Congress. Yet the military is also protectionist and profligate.

Thus President Samey is sure to remain under heavy pressure to abandon his new, liberal economic course. It would be wise for his creditors - and Washington - to strengthen his resolve by agreeing to a sensible program of debt relief. But crude displays essure would only strengthen the powerful hand of Brazil's economic nationalists.

His Struggle Goes On

An unkind fate has dealt another blow to dor, with or without President Duarte, has Salvador, Mr. Duarte, who is 62, is now in Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington, ill with cancer, and he has had to turn over his duties to the vice president.

What kind of leader has Mr. Duarte been? His qualities as a manager and tactician were never highly praised. He cannot claim the clear-cut, irreversible national achievement that would give his name a historic ring. But he has been that most valuable and admirable of politicians: a serious and decent person who chose to devote himself over the decades to the seemingly impossible mission of moving from his religious faith to the building of democracy in just about the most inhospitable circumstances imaginable.

For his efforts he has suffered grievous personal and family injury at the hands of right and left alike. Yet he has persisted in advancing the civilizing democratic element in a political landscape dominated by barbarities. He has sought to create the institustruggled to create a center and make it hold. Whether that center will hold in El Salvadecade. The country continues to be brutalized by what Mr. Duarte the other day called a "senseless and cruel" civil war that nits a flailing government against relentless Marxist-led guerrillas. The war has ensured that resources and a leading role necessarily flow to a military which, despite Mr. Duarte's exertions, is still tightly fastened at many levels to an unreconstructed landholding oligarchy which hates Mr. Duarte. His Christian Democratic party lost the legislature to this faction in March. His foes on left and right have used the chaos of the war and the political space opened up by his democratic progress to defy the rule of law. These days the guerrillas, ignoring peace efforts elsewhere in Central America, practice their familiar cruelties, and some of the old death squads are resuming their dark ways.

The United States bet heavily on President Duarte, figuring that he was as good a democratic leader as the region could possitions of a modern, self-governing society in a bly provide. Inevitably, that wager created place where caprice and violence otherwise a context in which U.S. policy goals were hold sway. Against immense odds he has a context in which U.S. policy goals were heavily mortgaged to the fate of this one man. His struggle goes on.

The most predictable political event this month must surely be the outcome of the French parliamentary elections (on June 5 and 12]. No one seems in any doubt that the Socialists will win. President François Mitterrand seems intent on transforming the French political landscape by constructing a center-left coalition that could govern France for years, much as the Gaullist center-right coalition did for two decades. Mr. Mitterrand's problem, however, is that he and his prime minister. Michel Rocard, may not be able to restrain the socialist yearnings of their party's influential left wine if they win by too convincing a margin. The last thing that France, with its sluggish economy and rising unemployment, needs as it prepares for the challenge of a single European market in 1992 is a return to traditional Socialist policies.

Japanese Aid for Indonesia

Japan's aid commitment to Indonesia for 1988-89, which represents an 87 percent increase from last year, gives strong evidence of the Japanese government's strong political commitment to help, based on the special quality and depth of relations between the two countries. The $2.3 billion aid package is also significant as it will provide an important signal to the international financial market that donors support the Indonesian government's adjustment measures and have confidence in Indonesian economic prospects. The Japanese government apparently fully realizes that Indonesia's severe liquidity problems at present have been caused mainly by external factors outside its control - volatile currency rates, notably the high yen appreciation, the uncertain world economic situation and the sharp decline in oil prices.

The Afghan Accords Point the Way for Other Deals

MOSCOW — Where else on Earth would one rather have been this past week than in Moscow? The skies were clear, the weather balmy, the mood of the people summery and light, and conversation everywhere was buoyant with excitement at the events of these days and in expectation of the future. The city was as packed as Bethlebem in the tax-gathering sea-son, and you could sell a room at any inn for a ton of myrrh. Fortunately, I was spared the competition for hotel rooms, having an apartment of my own in Moscow. For me, this past week of superpower summitry has felt like one of the culminating events of my life. The stage is set for a great development toward the peace between East and West that has been one of my lifetime's dreams.

This summit meeting has been depicted as a meeting with no major targets, no vital agenda. It is true that no major arms initiative was achieved. But the meeting most as-suredly continued the momentum toward the settlement of regional conflicts that was established in Geneva, with the Afghan accords. Such cooperation — often overlooked in the excitement about arms control -could be the most decisive change in relations between the United States and the Soviet Union, beginning an era of peaceful coexistence. The success of the superpowers in framing an agreement over Afghani-stan provided two important lessons and guidelines for the solution of other regional conflicts: first, that the superpowers can deal with each other rationally and pragmatically to achieve solutions; second, that the Russians should be believed when they say that they intend to ding to the signing on April 14 of the Geneva accords on Afghanistan and have the privilege to see, close up, the development of trust and understanding between Moscow and Washington that led to that historic agreement.

In February 1987, Diego Córdovez, undersecretary-general of the United Nations, visited me in Los Angeles to tell me that talks on Afmistan were stalled and that I could play a role in the peace process. He said that none of the participants in the Geneva talks could agree on a timetable for the withdrawal of Sovi-

I was very glad to play a part in no preconditions as to the nature of government in Kabul to replace Major General Najibullah. Thus, with dazzling speed, the central problem in the Afghanistan peace process became an issue of credibil-ity and confidence: Could the Soviet Union he believed and trusted?

In Moscow in September, Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and Yuli Vorontsov, a deputy foreign minister, told me that Secretary of State George Shultz had finally accented that Moscow honestly and fully intended to withdraw. On the other hand, as late as Jan. 7, 1988, President Reagan's chief of et troops and that they could not staff, Howard Baker, wrote to ask my agree on the identity of a leader for a opinion of Mr. Gorbachev's attitudes wernment in Kabul to supplant the ajibullah administration.

Naturally, I told Mr. Cordovez that I would do everything within my power as a private individual to eve a settlement. During the next 14 months I flew to Kabul once and to Pakistan half a dozen times to confer with President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq and his cabinet and with leaders of the mujahidin. My travels took me in and out of Moscow and Washington for meetings with officials at the highest levels. By the end of 1987 it had become clear that the Soviet Union was de-opinion of Mr. Gorbachev's attitudes toward Afghanistan, "I would welcome your insight into his current thinking based on your discussions with him during the [Washington] summit," he wrote. "We are unsure just how much the Soviet signals reflect a serious interest in moving forward quickly towards an Afghanistan solution and to what extent they are merely public relations."

I relayed this uncertainty to Mr.

Gorbachev in the Kremlin last Jan. 15. I also told him that I felt sure that the Pakistanis would not enter fully into the quickening peace process until and unless he dispatched Mr. Vorontsov to negotiate personally with President Zia in Islamabad.

viet Union would definitely withdraw by the end of 1988, it was determined to avoid a bloodbath. He did not reply directly to my suggestion regarding a Vorontsov mission to Islamabad, but when I saw Mr. Vorontsov the next day he laughed and said: "You did a job on the boss. Mikhail Sergeyevich ordered me last night to pack my bags and get to Pakistan." I promised Mr. Vorontsov that I would fly to Islamabad to be there when he met President Zia - a promise I kept on Feb. 10, two days after Mr. Gorbachev's announcement that Soviet troops would begin to leave Afghanistan in May.

President Zia and his colleagues were evidently stunned by Mr. Gorbachev's coup. They admitted as much. General Zia said that the Soviet Union had "stolen a march on us," and one of his most senior advisers voiced the fear that the superpowers "have us in a diplomatic box." President Zia desperately needed the reassurance that Pakistan and the millions of Afghan refugoes living in that country would not be abandoned by the United States in the rush to superpower rapprochement. In my presence, General Zia dictated a letter to Ronald Reagan, which I carried to Washington when I returned.

I gave the letter to the president and, when I visited him in the Oval Office to present my report as chairman of his Advisory Panel on Cancer, I urged him to call General Zia. I said: "It will make such a difference if you speak to him personally. If he gets a letter, he will think it was written by somebody on your staff; but if he speaks to you on the telephone, he will be reassured that you

Even so, the Afghanistan agree. ment bodes well for the future of the world. We may have confidence that Moscow and Washington will apply the lessons learned there to other regional conflicts.

In fact, Mr. Gorbachev told mein April that Afghanistan could provide a model for superpower understanding that could be applied to the Middle East and other trouble spots, including Cambodia southern Africa and Nicaragua

The model will work only if the Soviet Union has genuinely turned away from the policy of exporting communism. I believe that it has I believe that General Secretary Gorbachev has committed himself to making socialism (not comma nism) work in his own country by raising the standard of living of his own people, and that this ambition is his single-minded priority.

In the three years since he came to power, the Soviet Union has en gaged in no new adventures around the globe; it has formented no new conflicts in the Third World; it has sent no "military advisers" to devel oping trouble spots. In itself, the suspension of expansionist activity is a significant break with Soviet foreign policy throughout the greater part of this century.

However, my chief reason for op. timism in believing that the Moscow summit may have made significant progress toward the resolution of regional conflicts lies in a tiny ancodote relayed to me by my old and respected friend, Max Kampelman.

Max remembered attending small conference in Moscow which, in conversation with a senior Soviet official, he said that the Soviet Union would soon learn a lesson that the United States had learned at ready — "Empire does not pay."
According to Max, the Soviet official smiled and said, "We are learning."
The hope of the world depends upon the truth of that line, We man all pray that they are learning his? My impression, here in Moscow at ter this lovely summer week, is that the lesson has been absorbed AF ghanistan drove it home. ... Offia.

Down Below the Summits, Millions of War Deaths

WASHINGTON — In the real world down below summit meetings, 25 wars are still going on. That is not a typographical error: 25 is the number, as tabulated by a Washington research institute called World Priorities.

Ruth Leger Sivard, who signed the study, concedes the difficulty of getting an accurate casual-ty toll in these wars, but she estimates that they have already taken the lives of 3 million people, four-fifths of them civilians. She also remarked: "The United States and the Soviet Union together spend about $1.5 billion a day on military defense ... The developing countries spend almost four times as much on arms as on health care of their people. Yet 20 percent of their children die before their fifth birthday." She said that protecting Kuwaiti oil tankers in the Gulf costs the U.S. Navy an extra $365 million a year above normal operating costs. More wars, she said, were fought in 1987 than in any previous year on record. Her catalogue:

Latin America: Colombia, about 1,000 deaths a year since 1958; El Salvador, 65,000 deaths since 1979; Guatemala, 138,000 since 1966; Nicaragua, 30,000 since 1981; Peru, 10,000 since 1981. Middle East: Iran-Iraq, 377,000 lives in eight years; Lebanon, 52,000 since 1982. (The study does not include countries in which uprisings have taken fewer than 1,000 lives a year, as in Israel.)

By James Reston

Africa: Angola and Namibia, 213,000 since 1975 (in addition, the Angolan war is linked to a smaller conflict in which 5,000 people have been killed in the fight by the South West Africa People's Organization to expel South African troops from Namibia); Chad, 7,000 since 1980; Ethiopia, 500,000 by war and related famine since 1980; Western Sahara, 10,000 since 1975; Mozambique, 400,000 since 1981; South Africa, 4,000 since 1985; Sudan, 10,000 since 1984; Uganda, 102,000 since 1981.

Asia: Afghanistan, 14,000 Soviet troops and 85,000 Afghans since 1979; Burma, 2,000 since 1985; separatist violence in India, 5,000 since 1984; Indonesia (no reliable estimates from East Timor); Cambodia, 24,000 since 1979; Laos and Vietnam, 30,000 since 1979; the Philippines, 60,000 since 1970; Sri Lanka, 6,000 since 1984. This study estimates that overall, since the end of World War II in 1945, the death total in wars, rebellions and uprisings of various sorts have taken the lives of 17 million people — about half the number of deaths of the last world conflict. In London, The Economist, commenting on this study, observed that, aside from the Gulf war, wars between countries have disappeared. The magazine noted progress in the present evacuation of Soviet troops from Afghanistan and in U.S.-Soviet efforts to reduce nuclear arsenals.

The World Priorities study said that present nuclear arsenals, scattered worldwide, alone represent more than 26,000 times the explosive force of all armaments used in World War II.

Many of the present wars are fueled by the United States, the Soviet Union and other industrial countries, and the technology to produce nuclear weapons continues to spread The news of the present wars is limited by indifference, censorship and unwillingness on the part of the major governments to share what information they have on these wars with the public. To a large extent, therefore, these are "the forgotten wars," neglected even by those countries that preach the precious value of every human life.

Much was said at the Reagan-Gorbachev summit conference in Moscow about avoiding future nuclear wars, but little if anything about trying to end present wars, fought with everything from clubs and stones to poison gas. Or even about reducing the flow of weapons to the combatants. At least, the major nations that dominate the communications of the world could publish an annual tally of the world's dead.

The Important Meeting in Moscow This Month Is Yet to Come

PARIS — The Moscow summit meeting was of no great or lasting consequence. It no doubt saw Ronald Reagan's last bow on the international stage, a characteristic one, graceful but incorrigibly lightweight; show-biz, but classy show-biz. For Mikhail Gorbachev it was distraction from something really serious, the special Soviet Communist Party conference that starts in Moscow on June 28.

What happens there will have a lasting effect on the Soviet Linion and the future of the Soviet bloc. Preparations seem to be going not entirely as Mr. Gorbachev would wish. Several prominent reform figures in Moscow have been turned down as delegates. In the midst of the summit show Pravda published a detailed critique of local pressures to block popular candidates for the conference.

The public struggle over nominations to the conference is evidence of how far reform already has come. Conflict inside the party was in the past expressed at the top only, kept behind closed doors — settled by mer Moscow party leader, even went to the BBC and CBS with his argument that the Soviet party's secondranking official, Yegor Ligachev, should be fired. That would have seemed to past Soviet leaders a sign of the system's collapse.

Conceivably it is just that, although most people still are prepared to think it a sign of renewal. The question constantly to be asked, however is whether this system, arbitrary and authoritarian by nature, can be reformed in a controlled and limited way. The historical record suggests the contrary - that reform eventually lurches out of control, producing crisis or a return to repression.

Mr. Gorbachev has said that he wants "socialist pluralism." He also wants his way. He wants pluralism to result in the outcome he designates. A

Growth Reported

Purchasers Cite Expansion in May

NEW YORK - The U.S. economy grew in May, the 22d consecutive monthly advance, according to a survey of corporate purchasing ers released Sunday. The National Association of Purchasing Management said its index of economic activity rose to 55.1 percent last month from 54.9 percent in April.

The rate of increase had fallen slightly in the first three months of ar, indicating a slowdown in the pace of economic growth.

A reading above 50 percent generally indicates economic expansion, while a reading below that mark indicates a decline, the group said. For the first five months of this year, the index has averaged

"The economy continues to ex-pand at a moderate rate," said Robert J. Bretz of Pitney Bowes Inc., chairman of the group's sur-

An increase in new orders, par-ticularly among exporters, helped boost the May index, although the growth in production slowed from the previous month, the report said. "New orders, fueled by robust growth in export orders, increased at a brisk pace and all but assure the first half of 1988 will end with a record of modest but healthy ecoiomic growth." Thirty percent of the 250 purchasing managers surveyed said their companies had more new orders, compared with 16 percent that reported fewer orders. Fiftyfour percent said orders were running at the same rate as in April. In April, 37 percent of the respondents reported more orders, compared with 14 percent who re-ported less and 49 percent the Of those members exporting, 35 percent reported higher orders in May, compared with 40 percent in

The May survey also found that vendor deliveries increased slightly and inventories expanded. It said rising prices led declines for the 20th consecutive mouth.

France's Capitalist Cowboy Lagardère Takes Hachette on a U.S. Shopping Spree

This fascination with the power of creation has propelled Mr. Lagardère, 60, to build a $7 bil-lion communications and hightech empire, mixing and matching his corporate thoroughbreds.

As in house breeding, not every move has brought its anticied result, but today he controls Hachette SA, the world's fourth largest communications company — after Bertelsmann AG, Capital Cities and Time Inc. - and Matra Group, a French military, space and telecommunications giant.

His recent U.S. shopping pree, where he spent nearly $1.16 billion last month to bring the encyclopedia publisher Gro-Inc., at about $450 million, and the magazine publisher Dia-mandis Communications Inc., for $712 million, into his Hachette stable prompted the French press to proclaim Mr. Lagardère as back on the offensive.

Hachette is the second major European communications company to strengthen itself with U.S. purchases. Its rival, Bertelsmann of West Germany, vaulted into the lead with estimated 1988 sales of $6.3 billion by swallowing up Doubleday Inc. and the record division of RCA Inc. Mr. Lagardère's move to buy Grolier and Diamandis, therefore, is as defensive as it is offensive. This time last year the French press wrote of — and, to his mind, relished — Mr. Lagardère's public failure to buy one of France's six television stations, TF1.

"Though everyone wrote that I was nicer in defeat," said Mr. Lagardère, "I would have pre-ferred to be ugly and win." This brashness sets him at odds with the more conservative business milieu in France, where he admits that his style probably both-

Lagardère was brought up in the village of Gers in the south of France where the Lagardères have lived since the 15th century. It is not, however, the home of the old-line establishment.

Gascons are horsemen, cavaliers, entrepreneurs, ambitious and proud, he said, and Mr. Lagardère only wishes France would share in this attitude.

"A country that delights in running itself down cannot go in the best direction," he said. "People here pay money to see themselves ridiculed."

That style is characterized by action and an un-French lockerroom manner of referring to his nanagement team as "the boys." An avid sports fan and athlete who plays tennis at lunchtime and skis regularly, Mr. Lagardère was an amateur soccer star in his youth. Six years ago he bought a soccer club, Racing Paris, which he renamed Matra Racing.

Sometimes he gives the impression of action for action's sake, a comment that has been used both for and against his management style.

In the case of Matra, the fastpaced diversification that produced few early results brought him under criticism in the French business press for not exercising more caution. In the case of Hachette, however, where he took an ailing publishing di-nosaur and quickly turned it into a profitable communications giant, his decisive reorganization was praised. Bond Corp. Seeks Control Of Bell Group

SYDNEY - Bond Corp. Holdings is seeking control of Bell Group Ltd. in a takeover bid that announced Sunday.

Ray Schoer, executive director of the National Companies and Securities Commission, said Bond agreed to bid for the approximately 60 percent of the Bell Group shares that are not owned by it and the Western Australian State Government Insurance Commission.

Mr. Schoer said the agreeme stemmed from an investigation into Robert Holmes à Court's sale of most of his interest in the company to the two entities in April.

The securities commission was investigating shareholder com-plaints that the sale by Mr. Holmes Court of two 19.9 percent stakes in Bell Group meant effective con-trol of the company may have been transferred without a full takeover bid being made.

Mr. Schoer said the commission has approved the Bond Corp. bid. Spokesmen for Bond and Bell were not available for comment.

Mr. Schoer said Bond Corp. was offering 2.70 dollars a share, the same price it paid for the stock it bought from Mr. Holmes à Court. The Western Australian insurance unit has said it paid 2.50 dollars a share for its stock. If its bid is successful, Bond

Corp., which is run by the Australian entrepreneur Alan Bond, would obtain effective control of Bell Group's mining and minerals unit, Bell Resources Ltd. Bell Group, which also has media and investment interests, owns 44.7 percent of Bell Resources. Bond already owns 6.89 percent of Bell Resources through its Hong Kong subsidiary.

On Tuesday, Mr. Holmes à Court told Bell Resources shareholders at the company's annual meeting that he planned to resign as chairman of that company. Mr. Holmes à Court, who surrendered control of Bell Group after running it for 17 years, was unable to overcome difficulties related to the stock market collapse program to sell 5 billion dollars of assets after the October collapse, including most of its 30 percent values the company at 870 million stake in Broken Hill Pty, the larg-Australian dollars ($702.27 mil-est Australian company and the lion), the Australian government target of four unsuccessful takeover attempts by Mr. Holmes à Court.

Mr. Holmes à Court had hoped to restructure his indebted group of companies by merging Bell Group and Bell Resources, but a hostile 825.7 million dollar takeover bid by Ron Brierley, a financier from New Zealand, and Kerry Packer, an Australian entrepreneur, thwarted Bell Resources obtained an in-terim injunction to block that bid in Western Australian Supreme Court on May 30.

Mr. Holmes à Court has retained a 3.2 percent stake in Bell Group through his family company.

Demand Slows In Germany, IFO Reports

MUNICH - West Gernan consumer demand, which has become a main pillar of support for the economy, is expected to grow by 3 percent in 1988, the IFO Economic Research Institute said in a report Sunday.

In 1987, demand advanced by more than 4 percent. The slower consumer demand means retailers will be unable to keep sales at 1987 levels.

The retail industry is ex-pected to see sales rise by 2.5 percent in 1988 and wholesale volume will advance 2 percent, the institute said. IFO gave no 1987 comparisons. It also forecast that private incomes would rise 4.5 percent in 1988. IFO noted that prices were starting to rise in West Germany but that savings quotas were almost unchanged.

The Megabucks Stop Here: Wall Street's Top Earners

NEW YORK - Despite the perception that Wall Street is not the place it used to be for making money, one would never know by looking at a list of the most highly paid people in the investment

The estimated 1987 earnings of the leading 100 ranged from $2.4 million for Alan C. Greenberg, chairman of Bear, Stearns & Co., in last place, to more than $80 million for Paul Tudor Jones, 33, an investment manager who made the list for the first time last year. Some of Wall Street's elite bristled as preview copies of the annual survey by Financial World magazine, due out June 28, made the

Because the magazine includes paper gains on investments and relies heavily on figures gleaned from public documents, the num-

He was tied for 27th last year. Dean Harwood, a vice president, said the fouryear-old company had sold short before the market collapse in "The firm had an extraordinary year," he said. Still, Mr. Harwood disputed the magazine's conclusions. "We don't think their observations about who made what are reasonable." he said.

Leveraged buyout specialists occupied 4 of the top 10 positions. Henry Kravis and George Roberts of Kohlberg, Kravis, Roberts & Co. each made at least $70 million, and Jerome Kohlberg, who left to start his own firm but remains a limited partner, made at least $35 million, the magazine said.

Theodore Forstmann, a principal of Forstmann Little & Co., made at least 530 million, Financial World said.

The other top-ranked performers were George Soros, the money manager, in second place with at least $75 million, despute big losses for his investment funds in the market crash; Michael Milken, Drexel Burnham Lambert's "junk bond" kingpin, with Soil million, Michel A. Yugoslavia Gets Bridging Loan From Germany

BELGRADE - Yugoslavia has won a 172 million Deutsche mark ($100 million) short-term bridging oan from Westdeutsche Landesbank of Düsseldorf, official sources

They said the loan was signed on Friday in Bonn by Ambassador Milan Dragovic and was intended to bridge a financial crush until Yugoslavia gets fresh credits amounting to more than $1 billion from various sources this year.

Yugoslavia is seeking the new loans to stimulate its stagnating production and to help restructure

The sources said the West German loan was part of a common Redeemable at 127.13 in 1993 to yield 10.41%. Convertible into Alized Lyans PLC shares at 485 penas per share, a 101/1% premium. OUTSTANDING FEATURES OF 1987 OPERATIONS: • Retail banking:

Société Générale,

THE LARGEST PRIVATISED

FRENCH BANKING GROUP

IS PLEASED TO REPORT

on 1987

OPERATIONS AND RESULTS.

- Loans increased by 31.8%. Average total customer deposits, in the parent company's domestic network, rose by 10.1% from December 1986 to - Number of private customers with securities accounts reached one million (+57%).

• Financial markets: Société Générale developed its international network by opening a securities house in Tokyo and by becoming a member of the Tokyo Stock Exchange. In France, Société Générale ranks first in the options market, and in the case of foreign exchange options

• Financial services: Our lead position in this field was strenghthened, and Société Générale purchased a consumer credit company in Italy with 19 outlets.

1987 GROUP INCOME:

bas a 40% market sbare.

- Despite the unfavourable economic environment, Société Générale further increased its net income. - Net consolidated income was 2,680 million French francs, out of which the group's share amounted to 2,376 million. This result was achieved without any significant sale of - The group's share of "current income," i.e., net income excluding non-recurring items, increased by - Net banking income grew by 3.7%. Commission income reached 26% of net banking income in 1987, thus making our income less sensitive to changes in interest rates.

- Operating expenses rose by 10.9% due partly to a change in our methods of consolidation in 1987. Without this change the increase would have been 7% due largely to non-recurring privatisation expenses and to extensive investments in data processing.

- Société Générale pursued its policy of covering country risks and these provisions now exceed 50%. On the other hand the improvement in the financial positions of our corporate customers, and the ever increasing percentage of low risk assets in our loan portfolio enabled us to reduce provisions by 31%.

Nestlé Confirms Plans on Formula

Los Angeles Times Service LOS ANGELES -- Camation Corp., a unit of Nestle SA of Switzerland, has confirmed that it plans to enter the $1.6 billion U.S.

miant nutrition market. Shares of Abbott Laboratories and Bristol-Myers Co., two major producers of baby formula, were lower on Friday amid concern that Nestle was about to enter the U.S. market. Abbott Laboratories is the industry leader, with 55 percent of the market, followed by Bristol-Myers with 35 percent and American Home Products Corp.

Wall Street sources said Camation planned to sell an infant formula that is already being marketed in Europe by Nestle. Carnation refused to discuss its product until a June 14 press conference, saying only that it would form the cornerstone of a new mutitional product division.

Ioka Retains WBC Title; Foe to Protest

OSAKA, Japan (AP) — Hiroki loka of Japan retained his World Boxing Council straw-weight title Sunday with a controversial draw against Napa Kaitwanchai of Thailand, whose trainer claimed the fight's last round was cut short.

"When loka was in trouble in the 12th round, the timekeeper ended the fight 1 minute and 20 seconds earlier than the regular three minutes," said the trainer,

Charles Atkins. He said a protest would be made to the WBC. DALLAS (AP) - The Dallas Cowboys traded running back Tony Dorsett, the fourth-leading rusher in National Football League history, to the Denver Broncos late Friday for a 1989 draft choice conditional on how he does next season. Dorsett had sought a trade since Herschel Walker became the Cowboys starter at tailback late last season. Dorsett had announced that, to ease a trade with Denver, he had agreed to forfeit about $2.4 million in deferred payments.

Hatalsky Takes a 2-Stroke Lead in U.S. Golf

POTOMAC, Maryland (AP) — Morris Hatalsky, bidding to win his first golf tournament since 1983, shot three-under-par 68 Saturday to take a two-stroke lead after three rounds of the Kemper Open.

Craig Stadler, off a course-record 64, Mike Reid (67) and John Mahaffey (68) were two shots back, at 204, with defending champion Tom Kite (71), second-round leader Jim Hallet (72) and Mark Brooks (70) at 205.

Tuesday night Despite enjoying a home-court advantage for Game 7, the Lakers felt the pressure that came from their own success. While Dallas might have considered a defeat only as a small blemish on a great year, a loss by the Lakers would have nearly invalidated an excellent season. • They had the NBA's best regular-season record (62-20) for the second straight year. • They were the first league team to win 60 games or more for four straight seasons. • They had won seven straight Pacific Division championships.

Pat Riley, their coach, had predicted that but Dallas eventually tied the score with a 5-0 to worry and ask, When is it going to end?"

The game was tied after one period and was evenly played in the second despite the Lakers' periodically applying full-court pressure. Los Angeles led at halftime, 54-53, thanks to final-minute baskets by A.C. Green and Kareem Abdul-Jahhar wound down. Michael Cooper hit a 3-pointer that stretched the lead to 87-77; Rolando Blackman sank two free throws as time expired, but Cooper's shot was an omen for the fourth period. Dallas narrowed the gap to 87-83, but My-chal Thompson tipped in a Johnson miss, Cooper hit a 3-pointer and Johnson scored after a eal to make it 94-83 with 8:41 left to play. The Mayericks, on a 9-4 run, trailed by 98-92 with 6:15 left in the game, but James Worthy's baseline dunk, on an assist from Johnson, widened the margin to 103-94, and Abdul Jahbar's hook made it 105-94, forcing a Dallas time-out. The celebration was under way.

Boston was hurting against Detroit Friday

Dennis Johnson and Danny Ainge were still limping and experiencing back pains from injuries sustained in Game 5, but both were in the starting backcourt Friday night. Before the game Ainge had said: "A couple of pain-killers and a few 3-point baskets can make you forget a lot of things."

If the Celtics didn't have enough problems with a pair of injured guards, Robert Parish, the 7-1 center, suffered a bruised left knee that sent him to the bench with 7:25 left in the first quarter. Joe Dumars was called for an offensive

And Larry Bird entered the game struggling with a 37 percent shooting average from the field; the Celtics were shooting 42 percent as a team, 10 percentage points lower than they did

"I don't know what's happened to us," said Jimmy Rodgers, Boston's assistant coach.
"We've gone through stretches this series when we have been different as night and day. At times we're standing around. There is no mo-tion in our offense and that's when we get into trouble. This is so unlike us."

But maybe more credit belongs to Detroit's defensive play. In their 15 previous playoff games, the Pistons had held the opposition to fewer than 100 points 11 times.

Without Parish and needing to rest Johnson and Ainge, Coach K.C. Jones used all 12 of his players. Mark Acres and Artis Gilmore played center, but Jones finally shifted Kevin McHale to the middle and settled for Brad Lohaus, who hit two key baskets, as the power forward.

After sitting out the remainder of the first period, Parish re-entered the game with 5:21

With 7:40 left in the game and Boston trailing, 80-68, a fight broke out between Lohaus and Dennis Rodman, who were vying for position near the basket. As they battled on the floor, Ainge jumped on Rodman. When the incident ended, Rodman and Lohans were

With about six minutes left, Bird also missed a pair of free throws, a rarity for one of the best free-throw shooters in the league.

The loss marked the end of Jones's coaching career with Boston. In his five seasons, the Celtics won four conference championships and two leagne titles. Jones, who has been part of 10 of Boston's 16 NBA championships as a player and coach, will move into the front office. Rodgers is to replace him on the bench.

Amsterdam

The Amsterdam market recorded a modest rally last week, boosted by strength in the U.S. dollar and favorable economic forecasts. The ANP-CBS general share index rose 7.2 points to 249.2. Volume was 6.00 billion guil-ders, up from 4.18 billion in the previous week. The Kempen & Co. brokerage said falling interest rates and a continued rise in the dollar were expected to help the market this week.

Frankfurt

The rising dollar and strength in the West German economy combined to push prices higher on the Frankfurt stock market.

The Commerzbank index rose 55.2 points during the week, closing at 1,407.8 on Friday. Volume on the eight West German exchanges nearly doubled, rising to 15.93 billion Deut-sche marks from 8.65 billion in the previous tors reached their highest levels of the year during the week. BMW rose 27 DM to 530.50, Daimler-Benz gained 37 to 622, and Volkswagen advanced 8 to 251.50. Among chemical stocks, Bayer added 15.30 to 284 and Hoechst 11.50 to 275. In the pharmaceuticals category, Schering rose to 500.50, up 19.50 on the week. In the capital-goods sector, KHD finished at 116.50, up 8.50, and Linde at 679, 37 higher. Among electricals, AEG dipped by 1.50 to 207.50, while Siemens moved up 25 to 379.50. Bank stocks rose, with Deutsche Bank jumping 27 to 425, Dresdner up 5.20 to 243.80, and posted significant gains, with the key market indicator rising more than 50 points.

The Hang Seng Index climbed 54.65 points to close Friday at 2,568.35, while the broaderbased Hong Kong Index added 37.20 points to finish at 1.700.02. Average daily volume rose to 861.4 million Hong Kong dollars, up from 672.8 million in the previous week.

The week started off with a 24.71-point drop in the Hang Seng index on Monday, but the gauge rose in every other session of the week, including a 30.43-point advance on Thursday.

A government-appointed committee an nounced proposals to tighten the security in-dustry's self-regulatory mechanisms on Thursday, which helped the market overcome several weeks of dull trading. The committee was appointed after the worldwide stock-price col-lapse on Oct. 19, after which the Hong Kong exchange closed for four days.

London

Prices staged an irregular advance last week, aided by the rising dollar and strength on Wall Street but restrained by fears of rising interest

The Financial Times 100-share index rose 35.5 points to 1819.2, and the 30-share industrial index advanced 14.4 points to 1444.4 The market, which was closed Monday for a bank holiday, fell Tuesday, after a report that the recent strength of the pound has curtailed some British exports. But a sudden fall in the currency boosted prices at midweek

The recovery was slowed, however, by fears of higher interest rates. On Thursday, leading British commercial banks raised their base lending rates to 8 percent from 7.5 percent, but strength on Wall Street helped the London market post a gain for the day.

Oil-company stocks rose on speculative buy-ing after British Gas announced a £370 million friendly bid for Acre Oil.

Milan

Prices broke a recent string of declines and posted a solid gain for the week, which analysts attributed to strength on overseas markets and the results of municipal elections in Italy, which were regarded as aiding government

The Comit index rose to 480.79 from 465.66 a week earlier. Despite the advance, poor investment fund results led to some weakness in stock prices near the end of the week.

Leading issues closed higher, with Snia BPD notching up a 11-percent jump and another Fiat Group company, Fidis, adding 5 percent. Fiat itself went up by 3.1 percent. Gemina gained 5.6 percent after selling its Intercontinentale insurance firm to Winterthur. Oliverti rose by 4.6 percent and CTR by 3.2. The Ferruzzi-Montedison Group issues also did well, with rises of 8.3 percent for Silos, 4.8

percent for Meta, 3.5 percent for Agricola, and 2.9 percent for Ferruzzi Financiaria. In the insurance sector, Generali went up 2.7 percent and SAI gained 7.5 percent.

Paris

Falling French interest rates helped stock prices advance in Paris. The CAC index finished at 335.2, up from 324.3 a week earlier and only 8 percent below its level before the October collapse. The index has gained 35 percent since late January, but prices remain about 25 percent below their levels in March 1987. At that time, the ratio of stock prices to annual per-share earnings ranged between about 16 to 1 and 20 to 1. compared with approximately 10 to 1 now. Analysts said French stocks were inexpensive at current levels. The franc's firmness enabled the government to move interest rates lower, but French levels remain among the highest in the world. Business prospects for 1988 are regarded as encontaging.

Singapore
Stock prices advanced every day of the week, ending the Straits Times Industrial Index to its highest level this year.

The index rose to 1,023.90, up from 983.43

Analysts said good corporate results announced by most companies and 10.9 percent growth for the Singapore economy in the first quarter of the year contributed to the gain.

Trading was heavy. Value stood at 348.2 million Singapore dollars, compared with 258.5 million dollars the previous week.

Graf, meanwhile, had rolled over all her opponents in straight sets, only straining slightly to heat fourth-seeded Gabriela Sabatini in a second-set tie breaker in the semifinal. Having also won the Australian Open this year, Graf will now aim at the third leg of the Grand Slam, Wimbledon, in two

The world's No. 1 player declared that she has even improved her game recently. "My forehand is getting better," she said. "Just in the last couple of weeks I've really made a step forward. I feel stronger going into Wimbledon this year than

The compassionate French crowd tried its best to encourage Zvereva, cheering her at a first-set court change when she was behind by 5-0 and about to serve. But the next game was typical.

Graf won the first point with a backhand winthen hit a forehand winner. A blistering forehand return of service by Graf was just wide, giving Zvereva respite. But on the next point, Graf blithely picked up a Zvereva overhead and sent the ball whizzing down the line to take the set.

The second set was over in a blink, and there was Graf running over to the grandstand and getting a boost from a security man so she could kiss her father. In the award ceremony, Graf held the silver championship cup aloft and then took a microphone to address the crowd. She thanked the people for their support and said, "I'm very sorry it was so fast."

Graf later said she had seen Zvereva in the locker room, apologized to her and assured the loser that she would get better.

Graf said that her victory here last year was more satisfying. "The win last year, 8-6 in the third set, made it special to win it because it was against Martina and it was so close," she recalled. She said, "I felt very surprised on the court to win six-love, Zvereva appeared completely devastated at the news conference. Blinking back tears, she said: "I wasn't in the match. It was just a bad game, bad

She was asked why she had declined to talk to the friendly crowd after Graf had spoken. "I know what to say," Zvereva said. "But I just couldn't do it." Then her face reddened; she put her hands to Leconte might not think so. Fans here have always been critical of his up-and-down play. Following the singing of the Marseillaise and a fly-by of French Air Force jets trailing blue, red and white smoke, the crowd cheered loudly for Leconte. But after he lost the opportunity to serve out the first set the crowd abandoned him.

The score was 4-all in that opening set when Leconte, in his first Grand Slam final, produced the kind of winning string that boosts French expectations, breaking Wilander at love. He pushed Wilander fourth place at 276, three ahead of Briton Ronan Rafferty, who birdied each of the three holes for a 69. first point. Serving for the set, however, Leconte ran into a stubborn Swede. On the first point, Leconte threw everything at Wilander - a driving forehand putaway, an overhead and a way just short of the green, plugged sharp volley — but Wilander picked his next shot under the lip of a up each shot and won the point. LONDON — In the City of London financial district, up Cornhill Road - where the Scottish Widows Society stares across the street at Hermes of Paris lies the street known as St. Mary Axe, and the stately marble pillars of the Baltic Exchange. St. Mary Axe, if romantic imagination ruled the world, would be a narrow lane crowded with brownbrick monuments to commercial sobriety, but down at the corner a Pompidou Center-style building has risen, all hypermodern ductwork and piping, and it would seem that German bombs and contemporary architects have pretty much done for Charles Dickens's London.

Likewise, in the commercial trader's world of markets and exchanges, the telex and the fax machine have long replaced the personal tradition, where business was done face to face, often in coffeehouses, from the earliest days of the British Empire.

On the floor of the Baltic Exchange, however, from noon to 2 P.M. every working day, shipping brokers and charterers, perhaps a hundred strong, gather in twos and threes for quiet conversation and the "fixing" of --- final agreement on - contracts. Cargoes find ships; ships find cargoes. Scores of confidential discussions make for a low rumble in the high-ceilinged hall, punctuated now and again by a liveried attendant called a "waiter" who sings out names from a sort of raised floor. He is there to help brokers find one another and, after hours, to ring a bell signifying that the day's session has ended.

These men and women are here to gossip. They tell you so quite Alain Hammond, a broker for Transmarine Shipping Agencies, says, "You could call this a very large garden wall — gossip has always played a large part in the shipping business. We know that India didn't have a monsoon last year, that the Soviets are lifting [loading] soybeans at the River Plate. We knew when there was a severe frost on the coffee beans in Brazil, and when there was a minor cave-in on the Panama Canal. This business is an exercise in economic geography.

Traders exchanging information and "fixing" contracts on the floor of The Baltic Exchange.

The Baltic Exchange, known affectionately as The Baltic — a gentleman hurrying past was not-ed by the phrase "He's always been a Baltic man!" - is no charming British anachronism. It is the basic, no-nonsense business of maritime shipping; the negotiation of dry-loading contracts between representatives of distribution merchants, for instance grain companies like Louis Drevfuss. and the owners of ships: tramp freighters that ply the sea lanes from Rotterdam to Aqaba, from Monrovia to Hamburg. When contracts are fixed by a handshake on the floor of The Baltic, they are as firm as any sheaf of paper produced by platoons of lawyers. "Our word is our bond"

The Baltic Exchange more or less originated in 1744, with an advertisement in London's Daily is the motto of The Baltic, and

"This is to give notice that the House late the Virginia and Maryland Coffee-House in Threadneedle-Street, near the Royal Exchange, is now open'd by the Name of the Virginia and Baltick Coffee-House, where all Foreign and Domestick News are taken in; and all Letters or Parcels, directed to Merchants or Captains in the Virginia or Baltick Trade will be carefully deli-

The notice goes on to advertise the "Punch, made in any Quantity, in the Greatest Perfection' and other delights, and is signed by "Jack from Grigsby's." In other words, new name, same place, same good old service.

Shipping interest in the Baltic

Sea was to increase over the years, reaching one of its high marks in the early 1800s, during the Napoleonic era, when a trade war broke out between Denmark and Britain. Denmark is the choke point of the Baltic, and at the time received such attention as the Gulf does today, as the Suez Canal did in the mid-1950s, as the Panama Canal may in the future. For the essential produce of the early 19th century sailed under Danish cannon every day: timber from Sweden and Finland, grain and hemp from Russia, as well as cattle fat, tallow, which lit the city of London and all of Britain By 1873, a surge of frantic spec-ulation in tallow caused The Bal-game on the floor every Christmas Eve and, on Nov. 5, Guy Fawkes Day, they used to shoot great big rockets up into the domes. Or they used to bring in the organ grinder from the street outside — with his monkey, I might add. And then there was the time two gentlemen - this was for charity you understand—won a bet by exchanging their underpants in the middle of the trading floor." The Baltic Exchange has not held its position as the world's porter, declining to give his name. We used to have a terrific rugby only international shipping exchange without competition. A few years ago a trading facility was established in Piracus, Greece, but never achieved The Baltic's dominance. At one time the bar at the Downtown Athletic Club in New York was a favored center for the exchange of ship-ping intelligence. But The Baltic remains pre-eminent. Alan Ham-mond explains: "London owners talk to each other, we try to know everything, and some countries, secretive types, don't like to fix here because they think we know too much."

And The Baltic has grown. It is now home to futures markets in grain, potatoes, com, soybean meal, meat and tourists — some broker companies specialize in aircraft chartering for freight and passengers. In addition there is the recently established BIFFEX market, which deals in freight futures contracts and sets an index price based on 13 typical shipping

But the main business of The Baltic remains dry chartering. Oil tankers and refrigerator ships are negotiated by telephone and con-firmed by telex or fax but the tramp market, the plain, daily, essential transport of grain and fertilizer, coal and crushed rock, is worked out on the floor of The Baltic. "Computers can't do this," says Inge Mitchell, The Baltic's press officer. "You must have the right ship, the right cargo, at the right price, at the right time, at the right place in the world. That can nly be worked by people, that's what gossip is all about."

Mopery on the Kiss-and-Tell Front

By William Safire Washington — Because I once wrote a White House

memoir of the Nixon era, and because I often issue diatribes or hosannas about books written by more recent White House aides, I am often asked: "Where do you stand on kiss and tell?"

My position is unequivocal: When used adjectivally, the phrase must be hyphenated, as in " I have no affection for these kiss-and-tell books,' said President Reagan.' But when the phrase is part of a predicate, and does not modify a noun, the hyphens are not used: "A gentleman," wrote George Bernard Shaw to the actress Mrs. Patrick Campbell in 1921, "does not kiss

The former White House spokesman Larry Speakes and the former domestic adviser Martin Anderson, like the former budget chief David Stockman, have been attacked as being involved in kiss-and-tell." No noun is present, but "activity" is understood; the phrase modifies the understood noun and should therefore be hyphenated. But the phrase itself is undergoing what grammarians call func-tional shift —a pair of verbs being used adjectively before becoming a hyphenated noon, the way she d-tell time became show-and-tell, defined in Merriam-Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary as "a classroom exercise in which as a classical winds children display an item and talk about it." Similarly, the hit-and-run game, an 1899 description of baseball, became hit-and-run driving a 1924 expression that identifies a felonious act - with the hyphens intact in the adjectival phrase; the line between adjective and noun is blurred when there is an implied noun being modified, as in "a case

The kiss-and-tell phrase is always used pejoratively or in denial. The biographer Merle Miller quoted Harry Truman as saying that Dwight Esenhower had once considered divorcing Mamie to marry "this Englishwoman," a reference to his wartime driver, Kay Summersby, who steadfastly commented: "I am admitting nothing except that I have never been one to kiss and tell." (Correct, no hyphen.) "It won't be a kiss and tell" book," said Robert Gottlieb of the William Morris Agency, amouncing the contract-signing of Donald T. Regan, the former White House

The original meaning of the infinitive phrase to kiss and tell was annoy," which is not new or incor"to boast of one's sexual exploits." rect, but I like to reserve it for the It was coined, or first used in print, sense of "worsen, exacerbate," beby the playwright William Concause aggravate comes from the greve in his 1695 comedy, "Love Latin aggravare, "to make heavifor Love": "O fie, Miss," said a cr," from gravis, same root as grieve swain worried about his love's in- and gravity, as well as gravitas, discretion (she was in the process of which all presidential candidates blabbing all to her stepmother), are supposed to have.) von must not kiss and tell."

That sense has given way to a figurative use in recent years, meaning in its most neutral sense "behind the scenes" or "revealing." and in its most frequent sense
"with warts and pumples" or "containing embarrassments." Inherent in the phrase is a report by a participant or an insider.

N a cartoon by Jeff MacNelly, a figure wearing a western lawman's hat and badge labeled "Sheriff Meese" sits at a desk in front of a "wanted" poster. The man pictured as wanted by the law is the same Sheriff Meese, and the caption lists his crimes as "lottering" (presumably staying too long in office under fire) and "aggravated mopery."

What's mopery? You won't find the word in most dictionaries, though some of the best American writers have used it. Red Smith, in chief of staff, in early 1987. (The wrote tongue in cheek about an choice to go with quotation marks umpire's view of the baseball manrather than hyphens was The ager Billy Martin: "He talked Washington Post's, I think in error, about haling Martin into court on but that's arguable; the inaccurate charges of assault, battery, smoking in the subway, spitting on the new book by Donald Regan," said lin Fitzwater in 1988, lamching a Note the trivial implication, at counterattack at the memoir that the end of a list of hard-to-prosecute offenses. Russell Baker used cy on an astrologer, "is a kiss-and-tell story in the mold of all books the definition and origin: "I even found a man who committed mopery. Actually, mopery isn't a crime, but only an old policemen's joke in which it's defined as the act of displaying yourself in the nude to a blind person."

Thus, the most common sense of mopery is "trivial violation"; when jocularly juxtaposed with aggravated, the phrase used by cartoonist MacNelly has a nice sense of "trumped-up charge." (In legal terminology, aggravated means cause it is usually combined with noun phrase. That way, the only an intent to commit another crime, time the phrase is not hyphenated such as armed robbery. In general such as armed robbery. In general English, the verb aggravate is often used as a synonym for "irritate,

A second sense exists to mopery. That comes from the verb to mope, meaning "to hang about in a state of dejection, to sulk, to behave like a listless teen-ager rejected by the opposite sex." The Time magazine reviewer Richard Corliss referred to direction "sympathetic to the awkward pauses in teen talk, to the mopery of first love.

This second, non-slang sense is the source of mope rock. An article in The New York Times in 1987 titled "Glum Rock: Mope Around the Clock" elicited a letter from Lawrence Haddad of Washington, protesting the assertion that "Mope bands don't lighten up." and arguing that members of "the Mopery" have consciences that can be expressed in lyrics set to melodies that can be danced to. Be very careful with mopery. You may offend a rock group or an
